Pueblo Storyteller Pottery

Helen Cordero of the Cochiti Pueblo is known as the first person to make a storyteller doll. The people of the Cochiti Pueblo in New Mexico, situated between the Rio Grande River and the Jemez Mountains, have been making distinctive pottery featuring black designs over the top of layers and layers of white clay slip for over one thousand years. One of the most common was a mother holding a child. These mother-child figures were known as "singing mothers" because their mouths were always left open to let the lullaby out.

In 1964, drawing on the "singing mother" motif, Helen created a clay figure based upon her grandfather Santiago Quintana. Mr. Quintana was a renowned pueblo storyteller. What she most remembered about is seeing him with lots and lots of grandchildren, like herself, climbing on him, begging him for stories.

Winter Wonders: Holiday Gift Show

Give this holiday season a more meaningful touch with gifts created by local artists. The artists at Ashland Art Works have been busy designing unique holiday creations sure to delight your friends, family, and - of course - yourself!

On First Friday in December, along with our member artists we'll be hosting some talented young artists. Students from the Advanced Jewelry class at AHS collaborated to create an amazing jewelry collection. Each piece features a faceted garnet, in response to newly learned techniques. Students Sasha Aazami, Grace Honeycutt, Rachel Feinberg, and Eliana Olsen will also show other works created during their three jewelry classes at AHS.

As always, join us to wander our sculpture garden under starlit skies, meet the artists, and visit our five beautiful galleries.

Art and Soul Gallery

"Gazing with Awe; Rogue Impressions and Beyond" Oil Paintings by Silvia Rothschild Trujillo

These are paintings that communicate mood and a sense of time by coloring the light and shadow of each season, scene, or still life with a perception of beauty that begs for acknowledgment. These works encourage and inspire the viewer to see more; to see the awe in everyday occurrences or commonplace surroundings which sometimes go unnoticed during our hurried days.

Silvia's painting will be exhibited November 28 through December 31, 2017.

DECEMBER 2017

FEATURED GALLERIES

Studio 151

Birds, Buddhas, Books and Snakes

Currently on display is mixed media sculptural art by Elizabeth York. The work includes various buddhas composed in wall relief form, sacred geometry and a series investigating her experiences of relative "time". Also on display are sculptures from 2 books, the Book of Beings (various ego structures) and Embracing the Shadow (exploring emotions) both arising from the processing of childhood traumas.

Elizabeth's most recent work includes a playful series of animals and a variety of birds. Much of the art will be part of a sale in December, creating space for 2018.

All proceeds from the studio support Shine a Light, a 501(c)3 organization committed to raising awareness about, preventing and rehabilitating victims of sex trafficking locally and abroad. iwillshinealight.org
